Excerpt: . . . and tried to swallow his heart, which seemed to have got stuck some where in his long throat. He was considering, not the propriety, for Jerry was polite, but the possibility, of knocking. He trembled too decidedly. Ashton had seen him coming, and had guessed his errand, for the morning had given him no excuse to see Minnie, and she had said, the evening previous, If we cant see each other, we can sometimes write. Jerry is trusty. He went to the door, trembling quite as decidedly as Jerry, and though he fully intended to be gracious and express the gratitude he felt, he was entirely unable to do any thing but to take Minnie's letter, and, with a freezing dignity, give Jerry one for her. You will oblige me, said he, by giving this to Miss Meadows; and he closed the door and returned to his small kingdom, very much happier than kings usually are. Jerry turned over the large packet and said: Now, I guess hes writ his life --and then he added, after some consideration, having recovered his equanimity when the door shut- well, I guess hes all right, tho he haint got her ways, no how. But he attested the sincerity of his faith in the young man, by putting his letter in the pocket over his heart. More things that I can t understand, said Jerry--here is this heavenly-hearted girl fallen in love with this Pagan, who has...
