Excerpt: . . . courtiers and sycophants, he grudged every verse that did not rehearse his own praises. When Simonides approached to receive the promised reward Scopas bestowed but half the expected sum, saying, Here is payment for my portion of thy performance; Castor and Pollux will doubtless compensate thee for so much as relates to them. The disconcerted poet returned to his seat amidst the laughter which followed the great mans jest. In a little time he received a message that two young men on horseback were waiting without and anxious to see him. Simonides hastened to the door, but looked in vain for the visitors. Scarcely, however, had he left the banqueting hall when the roof fell in with a loud crash, burying Scopas and all his guests beneath the ruins. On inquiring as to the appearance of the young men who had sent for him, Simonides was satisfied that they were no other than Castor and Pollux themselves. SAPPHO Sappho was a poetess who flourished in a very early age of Greek literature. Of her works few fragments...
