Not illustrated. 1908 Excerpt: . . . as they were to inscribe their names on all their work. At the bottom of the staircase two small, shapeless lumps of iron were found, and this fact is of peculiar interest as being a possible argument for a Babylonian influence. Mr. Macalister refers to Father Hugues Vincent, a careful French archaeologist, who reminded him that the use of iron in Babylon goes back to the time of Gudea, one of the oldest Babylonian kings, about 3000 B. C. In any case, this is the oldest evidence of the use of iron yet found in Palestine, but that the fragments had to do with the formation of the cave is unlikely, as wherever the condition of the rock makes the preservation of the tool-marks possible, there is evidence of the use of Hint chisels by the quarrymen. It is hoped that this final year of the excavation at Gezer will enable Mr. Macalister to complete the work he has undertaken there, which has so fully proved the wisdom of a thorough exploration of one mound, and has given to the world the secrets of this ancient city.
