Not illustrated. 1889 Excerpt: .their existence; testified to the universal sense, entertained in the Colonies, of the injustice and oppressiveness of the several Acts of the British Parliament which impose duties and taxes on the Colonies, not for the purpose of regulating the trade, but with the sole intention of raising a revenue; defended the action of the last House in acquainting Mr. Charles Townshend, as has been seen, had hoped to obtain the acquiescence of the Colonies in his recent legislation by reason of the distinction which they had been accustomed to urge between regulations of commerce and impositions for revenue. His measure unavoidably revived the momentous practical questions, hitherto only superficially treated, respecting the soundness of this distinction and the extent to which it was applicable. Mr. Townshend had relinquished the benefit of it for his Act when he announced it in the Preamble to be an...
